Ellyson will make addresses to-morrow on the occasion of the beginning of the emancipation celebration. So The Times announced Sunday. So Mayor Ellyson and Governor McKinney repeated yesterday in spite of contrary statements made in other Richmond papers. A few days ago Governor McKinney received a letter from the Executive Committee who have in charge the emancipation celebration. The letter is signed by George Williams, Jr., general superitivendent; and reads as follows:

You can naturally imagine that we are exceedingly anxious to have you deliver the welcome address on the part of our native State on the occasion of our emancipation celebration. We are aware of the fact that some slight misunderstanding reats in the minds of some as to the position of the Executive Committee in this matter. You not doubt remember that you were waited upon by a committee from our board and carnessive represents to be present. No change whatever has been made in that arrangement. Our programme has been made out with this thought in view, and any other statement is entirely unauthorized by our board. Meeting as we do to celebrate an event fraught with so much interest to us, having in our minds no prejudice or any feeling other than that of thenkfulness to God for the great hieraffice with the event, but as true and loval citizens of our dear old Commonwealth, desiring her well-being and prosperity, and desiring the colored citizens from abroad may understand how kindly disposed our white friends of Virginia are to us, believing, as we do, that you can and will look over any mistate or mis-statement that may have been made by persons in nowise suthorized to act, we do sincerely hope that you may reconsider your determination and be present to welcome us, if in the bounds of a possibility, with the understanding on my art that nothing will be said to mar the good feeling and pieces our vite friends of Virginia are to us, believing, as we do, that you can and will look over any mistate or mis-statement that may have been made by Christians to Politics-Catholic Con ect was, "The Christian's Duty to His and throughout its treatment much practical instruction.

The very word politics 'ls unsavory. It means, good people seem to think, degradation. Politics is synonymous with treating and being treated to whisky every hour in the day during the long canvass. Politics means shaking hands with the blackest-hearted villains to secure their suffrages; means the lowest forms of trickery, intrigue, demagogism. and debauchery. "Don't touch politics," people say. "To be a Christian, you must keep out of politics." After all, however, what is politics? Is it necessarily the baseness of knaves, or the ignorance of dupes, operating through every species of corruption for the subjection of virtue and intelligence? Webster defines politics. He calls it "the sefence of government; that part of ethics or morals which has to do with the regulation and government of a State or nation; the preservation of its peace, safety, prosperity; the defense of its existence and rights against foreign control or conquest; the augmentation of its strength and resources, and the protection of its clivens in their rights, with the preservation and improvement of their morals."

Analyze that definition. I pray you. For indifferentists towards politics, name any other science that is better worth the study and attention of Christian men than the outline in this comprehensive definition. Folities addresses itself to legislation for the poor and for the reforms of the criminal, on his just and proper punishment; for the protection of the weak; the administration of instilect to the classes; the education of the ionsilect to the classes; the education of the low day control politics are political. ignorant; the lostering of moetry mess.

How dare you call politics debasing? No, so far from assigning the politician the lowest place in the scale of useful employment it has always seemed to me that if he has any adequate conception of his duty, and has the manhood to discharge it, his position is very high. I go so far as to say that he is second only to that of the consecrated minister of our Lord Jesus Christ. Let me tell you, that he service to our fellow-men. If rendered faithfully and efficiently by competent and conscientious statesmen, is more needed to-day than that which lies within the sphere of the Christian politician.

The Southern Finance Company.

Elsewhere will be found the announcement of the organization of a new financial institution which covers an important field, that is called the Southern Finance Company, and its headquarters is at Roanoke. Mr. J. L. Waring, cashier of the Commercial Bank of Danville, is president of the company; Mr. John B. Levy, president of the Company; Mr. John B. Levy, president of the Citizens' Bank of Roanoke, is treasurer, and Mr. D. C. Gallaher is secretary. The directory is composed of well-knows gentlemen of character and standing in the business circles of the cities represented in the organization.

The authorized capital of the company is $1,080,090, divided into shares of $100 cach, on which $52 is to be paid in easy instalments, and its object is to place investments in real estate and other property where they will give the best returns for the stockholders. With the information at its command and the opportunities in its reach, this company can invest to much better advantage than individuals. With Roanok as the center of its operations, and the entire field of Southern development to select from in piacing its investments, it will have the assurance of more substantial profits and with less risk than are at the command of private parties. It can, therefore, accomplish for individual investors what they f private parties. It can, therefore, omplish for individual investors what the
